

Rock fans got just what they were expecting Saturday night at the Chase County Fair when Theory of a Deadman rocked the house with their modern rock music to close out this year's fair concert series. The group played their hits and interacted with the crowd throughout their show. Below, lead singer and guitarist Tyler Connolly holds up his phone to take a video of the crowd to see which half of the audience was the loudest. The video was later posted online. Nearly 2,200 attended Saturday's rock concert, which also featured Brian Howe, former lead singer of Bad Company. (Republican photos)
