

Gov. Dave Heineman along with members of the Governor's Youth Advisory Council announced seven vacancies on the council with members from Districts 2 and 3 especially needed. The council is facilitated by Nebraska Children and Families Foundations.

"I want to applaud the interest these young people have taken in civic issues," Gov. Heineman said. "These students are the future leaders of our state. I want to encourage more young people to be involved in public service."

Members meet quarterly to review pending legislation, discuss issues impacting youth, learn about politics and share this information with their individual communities.

Additionally, the council represents young people from their economic, cultural, geographic and familial backgrounds in discussions about important issues. This is done through regular meetings with the Governor and an annual luncheon with state senators during the legislative session. They provide input on topics including education, health, foster care, economic development and alcohol, tobacco and other drugs.

"As a youth delegate of the Nebraska Governor's Youth Advisory Council, I am privileged to have a voice in our state government," said Justin Korth. "Meeting with Governor Heineman is a profound opportunity for us to represent the youth voice from across Nebraska. Being the future leaders of our state, this exceptional opportunity to meet with Governor Heineman is a very rewarding experience."

Created in 1993, the Governor's Youth Advisory Council provides an opportunity for young people ages 14-19 to be explore the legislative process, the role of the executive branch and encourage their peers to be more civically involved.

This council informs the governor on issues impacting Nebraska's young people. Up to 25 youths can serve on the council with equal representation from each legislative district.
