

Area residents who are interested in researching some family history will find this Sunday's program at the Chase County Museum of interest.

Local resources available to those wishing to delve into their family genealogy will be reviewed as well as how to access that information in Chase County. Much of the available information has been made possible through the work and research of Kermit Karns and Dennis Batterman, both of Imperial.

The program will begin at 1:30 a.m. at the museum in Champion. Karns will be on hand to provide information and answer questions. The museum is open 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday.
