

This Thursday is Halloween and many of the homes and businesses in Imperial have been decorated with attractive seasonal items. Some yards are scary, while others have welcoming animated characters, all in anticipation of one of the more popular holidays here. The weather this week looks like it will be cooperative for the trick-or-treaters, many of whom will be out downtown after school, then later in the residential areas in their search for candy. Two of the homes in Imperial that caught this photographer's eye included, at top, Jim and Idonna Elder's at 244 West 12th, which has a few scary ghosts, but other animated creatures, as well. At right, Luke and Crystal Ferebee's home at 946 Broadway might be a bit more frightful to some as they approach the front door, having to pass by a couple of graveyards. (Republican photos)
