

The Nebraska Judicial Branch is warning the public about a computer virus that is being delivered via email falsely claiming to be about a court case.

The Judicial Branch has learned that the email references an upcoming court case; however, the email is a scam. Opening any attachment or clicking on any link in the message may trigger a malicious program designed to infect the recipient's computer.

The email is not from the courts nor is it about a court case.

If you receive an email with a subject line such as "Hearing of your case in Court" or "Notice to Appear in Court," it is recommended that individuals:

Do not open any attachments, click on any links or unsubscribe. Doing so may install the malware/virus onto your computer.

Delete the email.

The email appears to be coming from a variety of random sources.
