

Snowfall Saturday night and into Sunday dropped seven and a half inches, and along with it, some very nice moisture. The heavy, soft snowfall was a beautiful one, too, leaving many picturesque scenes in the community, even though the weather resulted in a winter storm warning Saturday night. A lamp post with tall evergreens behind also provided a pretty scene Sunday morning in the Max Addition. The snowfall also meant some work, however. Diane Kuenne was being a good neighbor Sunday morning, shoveling the entire walk in front of her home between 9th and 10th Sts. on Broadway. More snow fell in Imperial Tuesday afternoon, but it will be hard to match the beauty from the weekend snow. It left another inch of snow. (Republican photos)
