

Unlike several other days the past week, workers on the water main installation project on Imperial's main street were greeted with perfect weather Tuesday when they put in their first day on the job, starting at the corner of 7th and Broadway. A new eight-inch water main is being laid on the west side of Broadway from 7th to 11th Sts., connecting with two other sections of new water main laid the past couple years to the north and south. Myers Construction of Broken Bow is general contractor for the project, which also includes new meter pits and services to all homes and businesses along the four-block area. Traffic will be maintained both directions on Broadway, but there will be some intersections on the west closed as the work progresses. After the water main is installed, the crew will move to Campbell Park to replace an aging lift station in the park's northeast section. (Republican photo)
