

People from the area continue to take in the shooting classes offered in Imperial by Nebraska Shooters. Another pair of NRA-certified classes were held Sunday, one being the Conceal and Carry class and another titled “Personal Protection in the Home.” Seven students were enrolled in each class. The personal protection class focused on preparation of skills, firearm knowledge, mindset and basic knowledge of legal implications, all related to protecting yourself and property. In order to take the home protection class, students had to first successfully complete the basic pistol certification. Six instructors were here for the classes. Chris Tomky, who has been coordinating the local classes, said Nebraska Shooters is willing to return again for rifle classes and further advanced pistol classes if there is interest.
