

Today's youths know a lot, but how much do they know about using money wisely?

A contest being sponsored locally by Adams Bank & Trust seeks answers to that question.

"Lights, Camera, Save!" asks teens to role-play and record their thoughts about saving and using money wisely, said Mary Wilson, regional retail coordinator.

"It's a way to get kids thinking about money management and its relevance to their lives and future," she said.

To participate, students age 13-18 can stop by the bank in Imperial, or email Wilson at mewilson@abtbank.com for an entry form and contest details.

Videos can be submitted until Nov. 30, after which Adams Bank & Trust will host the first round of judging and submit one winning video to compete at the national level.

Students can win up to $5,000 plus $1,500 for their school.

Grand prize winners will be announced in March 2014.
