

Getting the lights on the football field, after a lengthy controversy about the height of the poles, allowed the Chase County Longhorns to play their home games on the new field. This was the inaugural kickoff for the new field when the Longhorns played host to Holyoke, Colo., to open the 2009. The field was part of a new sports complex south of the school that included the new city pool and a shared locker room facility. (Republican file photo)
